

About the Author

Joyce Valenza is librarian at Springfield Township High School in Pennsylvania. She is the techlife@school columnist for the Philadelphia Inquirer and author of two previous books, Power Research Tools and Power Tools Recharged. Her video series, Internet Searching Skills, was a YALSA (Young Adult Library Services Association) Selected Video for Young Adults in 1999. Another video series, Library Skills for Children, was released in 2003, and a six-volume video series, Research Skills for Students, was released in fall 2004. Joyce's Virtual Library won the IASL (International Association of School Librarianship) School Library Web Page of the Year Award for 2001.

Joyce is active in the American Library Association (ALA), the American Association of School Librarians (AASL), YALSA, and the International Society for Technology in Education (ISTE). She contributes regularly to Classroom Connect, VOYA, Learning and Leading with Technology, and School Library Journal. Joyce speaks nationally about issues relating to libraries and thoughtful use of educational technology. She is a Milken Educator and an American Memory Fellow, and is currently working on a doctoral degree at the University of North Texas.

Joyce lives—and shares workstations—with her husband and two nearly adult children in Rydal, Pennsylvania. At the conclusion of her doctoral program, she may return to her hobbies of reading, creating Web sites, dancing, crafting, shopping, enjoying wine, and sleeping.

Joyce's Virtual Library is located at mciu.org/~spjvweb
Her home page: mciu.org/~spjvweb/jvweb.html
Her professional site: neverendingsearch.com